

BATHROOM innovations

Ceramic tiles have been used in homes and public areas for more than 3000 years. The ancient Greeks and Romans used tiles extensively in the construction of their magnificent public baths, some of which still survive. Today, no other product matches the durability and practicality of tiles, especially in wet areas.

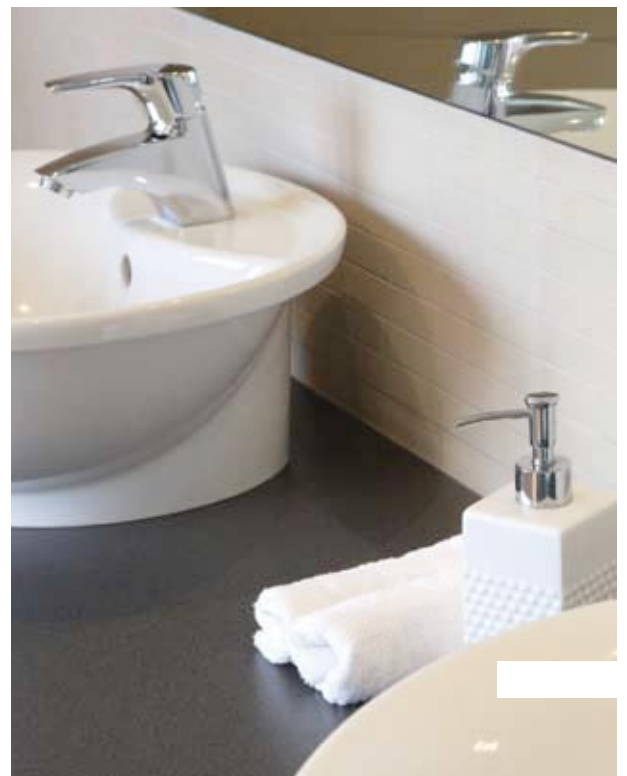

While technology and production skills have improved significantly, tiles are still basically made of clay, glazed and fired in an oven, just as they were in ancient times.

The most significant change to tiles over the years has been the vast range of styles, colours and textures now available. There really is a tile to suit every taste, style and design.

“ By means of water, we give life to everything. ”

When you enter a room that has a special, individual look and feel, yet you can't pinpoint exactly what makes it so exceptional ... that is style. It isn't one item, it isn't one colour – it's the way every element comes together as a whole.

“ Fashions fade, style is eternal. ”

Innovative use of linear techniques will bring a room to life without the need to introduce more colour. The 'scoring' technique draws the eye to the tile outline, making the room appear more tactile. It is particularly effective in toning down a dominant wall of bold colour.

MAIN PICTURE: A feature wall in dark tones can dominate a room, by using 'scored' tiles you can add interest and texture and break the colour ■ THIS PAGE (TOP LEFT): Define a wall area with Listellos (strip tiles) in a vertical line ■ TOP RIGHT: A bright room with plenty of natural light allows the use of strong colours ■ BELOW: Introduce colour to the linear theme, but keep it simple ■

“ If you want a golden rule that will fit everything, this is it: have nothing in your houses that you do not know to be useful or believe to be beautiful. ”
